

ALL YOU CAN EAT

When we were kids we were heavily into sports, and like most growing kids, we had voracious appetites. In fact, our favorite series of words back then were all you can eat. We loved when our parents would take us to buffets, smorgasbords, family style dinners, basically any restaurant where you could keep going back to fill your plate until you were full. It always gave us a feeling of happiness and security, and this appealed to us because any risk or fear that we would ever have about going away hungry was completely eliminated. We haven't felt that way in decades, until NOW. And this time it's not about food hunger or buffets, it's about investment hunger and security, and that same feeling now has to do with being proactive, disciplined, and scrupulous in navigating challenging times ahead, with the single goal to insure and protect the savings and equity that our family has worked so hard for over the years. And the choice investment vehicle in our spotlight is of course, Silver, if you hadn't already guessed.

Like a skipping record, we keep saying over and over again that Silver is on sale, and it's at rock bottom, yada yada. But seriously, it's more than on sale. It is deeply discounted by fraudulent manipulators who are suppressing the price so THEY can buy more silver at the cheap prices THEY have created. Read that last sentence again please. And they know full well that the public may also jump in, but really in comparison we can only pick up the crumbs on the ground. For the record, we're fine with crumbs on the ground if the crumbs are silver, because for us, it's still all you can eat in every sense of the phrase. Ironically, 1oz and 100oz bars and everything in between would be considered crumbs on the CRIMEX¹, and those bar sizes more than adequately satisfy our healthy appetites.

Our friends Ted Butler and Ed Steer continue to drive this point home, in that, while JP and The Sunshine Banditos have smashed the prices to oblivion, at the same time these crooks continue to buy silver like there's no tomorrow. They may be crooked, but they are diabolically smart. The old adage "if you can't beat 'em, join 'em" plays out here. For nearly a decade, continuous attempts by the good guys to foil the rig game of the manipulators have not panned out, as these gold-digging gangsters simply cannot be beat. Not unlike betting against the house in Las Vegas. You won't win, unless you play their game and wager your bet with them. The crooks will decide to change their game on their own time clock. But we can also watch their path and play along with their game, maybe not the rigging, but certainly the buying. After all, that's their sole purpose for rigging the game in the first place, so they can buy. If we buy when they buy, then one day when they score big, we will also score big, as in buffet, smorgasbord, all you can eat. That's really all the information we need to know. And as Newman stated so endearingly, "When you control the mail, you control Information."

"Mail" in this sense would be the market. And while we don't control the Information, we can now easily follow the information and order directly off the same menu as the bad guys. And when it comes to the menu, you know our choices; Engelhard rare, medium-rare, and hopefully some of the bread and butter bars, biscuits and loafs too, and please make sure that delivery and service is well done, or no soup for you! The greatest gift with collectible bullion is that you can buy it for close to its metal value, while benefitting from an upside investment potential that will be far greater than just the metal value. Buying collectible bullion is like ordering dinner and getting your dessert for free, or in other words, having your cake and eating it too. And you can still take advantage of the early bird special, which will unfortunately be ending very soon!

Doesn't that make you want to go back for more?!

Argently,
AE
