

...ORBIT!

Well, our last newsletter reported LIFTOFF, and at the time it sure seemed like a textbook launch into the stratosphere, but unanticipated heavy turbulence (caused by the ~~COMEX~~ CRIMEX and JP Morgan & Friends) has thrown us back into a rocky Orbit over the Earth, but make no mistake, the Moon and Outer Space are now closer than they've ever been on a technical and fundamental basis, and the rocket has plenty of fuel and argentum momentum to get where it's going.

We are already seeing large dollar swings in daily trading of all metals, and trading volumes exceeding all previous rallies. Silver and Gold are on high priority radar of the world's strongest economic countries (Brazil, Russia, India, China, South Africa, United Arab Emirates, Iran, only to name a few). COMEX and Central Bank price manipulation can now only happen when outside markets are closed, where the dirty work can be done with vapor thin volumes. While the rest of the world is voraciously stacking physical metals, the United States continues to allow price manipulation down to excessively low values that propel the buying by other countries. The BRICS countries are just waiting on the sidelines, and they continue to buy up whatever they can while it is on sale, and soon there will be Very Little physical metal available. All the COMEX and Bank trading is done with paper shorts and derivatives (think IOU's). Confirmed rumors even validate that many Silver and Gold ETF's are backed with HYPOTHECATED silver, in other words, no physical metal. How's that gonna work out when the SHTF? (Silver Hikes Ten-Fold!)

So much of the narrative we hear today on websites and blogs is about “Exit Strategy” and “When to Sell” (pardon the quotes). Question for everyone: If you currently have significant investment in physical silver, arguably the best investment asset on the planet and one that has been regarded as money since the beginning of civilization and has maintained its true purchasing value over eternity and then some, WHY would you EVER want to sell, and what possibly could you put your money into that would perform better long-term than Silver? We don’t have an answer for that. Sure, we understand the importance of taking some off the table to bag profits here and there, or to pay bills, because after all, silver is REAL money. But there should be no Exit Strategy for your ‘core’ holdings. But people say, “What about Cash?” Yes, a little available cash is important, but investments of cash or based in US dollars are like owning balloons with irreparable holes in them. Conversely, silver that is owned without debt and held in your own possession has zero third party risk. Silver is, in our humble and biased opinion, safer and more resilient than even real estate. And yet, did the idea of ownership of silver and/or gold EVER come up in any high school or college business or economics class? Very Doubtful. Silver is still a secret, and probably for good reason. Because above ground supply of silver as investment metal would be non-existent if the masses caught on to buying it, but make no mistake, THAT IS COMING. As mentioned above, the BRICS nations are not shy about promoting the importance of precious metals in investment portfolios, primarily government, but the general population as well. There are many very recent articles on the incredible gold demand by Chinese citizens, and silver and gold demand in India. And here in the states, if you’ve followed how COSTCO has done with their sales of Silver Eagles and Gold, it’s nothing short of breathtaking. The public is catching on to the blatant fraud of fiat currency, and resulting inflation. Less than a decade ago, “Trillion” was a relatively unheard of word, and now it’s commonplace. Next up in the coming narrative is Quadrillion, and then Quintillion, followed by Sextillion, likely by 2050. And believe it or not, we’re still not even at $30 silver yet! Just think when it hits $50, and then $100, and then $1000, and then $10,000, and then it’s LIGHTS OUT. The higher it goes, the more people will want it, and this could send prices into the stratosphere. So, while we’re still in ORBIT, now is a great opportunity to top off the stack before Silver ventures into the great wide open.

Argently,
AE
